

POSITIVELY TORAH

Step Inside the Art – Family Discussion

Chapter 2 – Hope

“Step Inside the Art” is a recurring activity that allows learners to slow down, look closely at artistic creations, step inside the scenes depicted, and see biblical texts in fresh and exciting ways. The artwork presented is intended to enhance our understanding of positive character strengths through Torah.

Throughout the year, you will receive “Step Inside the Art” activities to discuss with your child.

Hope: You expect the best for the future and work to make good things happen.

Your child discussed this “Step Inside the Art” piece when learning about Abraham and the superpower of Hope. To begin a meaningful conversation with your child, ask them what they discussed with their group and to share their thoughts about the art. Then it is your turn to look at the art and respond to the questions.

Thank you for partnering in building your child’s understanding and appreciation of Torah and positive character strengths.

POSITIVELY TORAH

Step Inside the Art

Describe what is happening in this scene.

- What do you think the artist is conveying about Abram and Lot's relationship?
- What questions would you like to ask the artist?

◀ Painted by Jan Victors, a Dutch artist, in the seventeenth century. It's now part of the Metropolitan Museum of Art collection.
